

HITCHCOCK EXPLAINS MANY CONTRIBUTIONS

TELLS WHO CONTRIBUTED TO THE CAMPAIGNS OF 1904 AND 1908 AND NAMES SUMS GIVEN.

NO CORPORATION FUND

But One Received And That Was Returned—Free Explanation of the Money Used in Campaigns.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Washington, D. C., July 17.—Postmaster General Frank Hitchcock today told the senate committee investigating campaign contributions of 1906 and 1908 that the record of the funds used in President Taft's election, as filed in Albany, N. Y., were correct, and that he could not supplement these reports by testimony.

Mr. Hitchcock said the totals collected through various agencies of the committee in 1908 was $1,655,518.29. Of this amount $620,150 was collected in various states and handled by the local state committees.

The latter sum never was turned into the treasury of the republican national committee, although that committee kept account of it.

Mr. Hitchcock promised to furnish the investigating committee with copies of the financial records of the campaign.

No contribution was received from a corporation, Mr. Hitchcock said, because congress just had passed a law prohibiting it. He told of the only near contribution he could remember having rejected.

It was offered by Gen. T. Coleman Dupont of Delaware, then a member of the republican executive committee, and amounted to $20,000.

"He turned it over to the treasurer, George R. Sheldon," began Mr. Hitchcock. "When I learned of it I sent for Mr. Dupont and told him I did not think we could accept it because the government had a civil suit against a corporation in which he was interested. I instructed the treasurer to return it and he did so."

Senator Paynter asked if this contribution was not then given to some other friend. Mr. Hitchcock replied that General Dupont declared he thought he was not doing his part and asked if he could not give the money some other way. Mr. Hitchcock said he replied in the negative.

The first friends he mentioned were Charles F. Taft, brother of the president, who contributed $50,000; William Nelson Cromwell, $25,000; Mr. and Mrs. Lutz Anderson, $25,000; Andrew Carnegie, $20,000; William Smith Coffey, $15,000; Frank Munsey, $10,000; Whitehall Reid, $10,000; M. C. Borden, $10,000, and General Corbin, for a number of persons, $10,000.

During the examination Mr. Hitchcock remembered a number of banks contributed $5,000 each, and they might have been interested in corporations, but he thought at any rate that was a small contribution for them.

The inquiry is a preliminary to the presentation of claims against Mexico.

AMERICANS FEARED RETREAT OF REBELS

Rojas' Troops Loot Warehouse and Rob Citizens at Madera Today.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Washington, July 17.—Extreme agitation exists among the Americans and other foreign citizens along the line of the Mexican Northwestern railroad, as a result of the retreat of the insurgent army in that direction. No serious trouble is expected, however, as the present policy of strict confinement of the Mexican armies confine themselves to commanding themselves to necessary supplies and transportation.

It is pointed out here that the people in that section of Mexico are now undergoing the same annoyance and distress that was suffered for many weeks by the foreign element in the state of Chihuahua, along the line of the Mexican Central railway. It is part of the fortunes of war and so long as American citizens do not resort to actual violence they must rest content with the knowledge that they will be amply paid for any pecuniary loss inflicted, as a result of the rebellion.

IMPPLICATES POLICE IN ROSENTHAL CASE

District Attorney Believed That Gambler's Murder is Tracable to "The Police System."

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] New York, July 17.—Further arrests in the murder case of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, who was shot and killed early yesterday, a few hours before he was to make additional charges that the police and gamblers were in collusion, were expected today to disclose whether the police or gamblers directly instigated the plot to kill Rosenthal.

A score or more of plain clothes men are searching the city early today for several men whom District Attorney Whitman learned were connected with the shooting. After several hours of grilling Louis Libby and William Shiro, who owned the motor car that was used in the killing, broke down and told all they knew of the murder.

District Attorney Whitman believed that "the police system" as it is familiarly known, was largely, if not directly, responsible for the slaying of Rosenthal who had professed his intention to make further charges that certain of the police were grafting on gamblers.

A fourth arrest in the case of the gambler, Herman Rosenthal, who was shot to death early yesterday morning just before he was to testify regarding charges of gambling graft, was made today. Louis Weber, a former gambling house proprietor, known in the underworld as "Bridgey," was brought to police headquarters. The district attorney has been urged to make complete investigation.

ATTACK VERACITY OF CHIEF WITNESS IN DARROW TRIAL

Credibility of John R. Herrington Assailed by Defense As Next Step in Bribery Case.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Los Angeles, July 17.—The credibility of John R. Herrington, who next to Bert H. Franklin, has been the principal witness for the state in the bribery trial of Clarence S. Darrow, is the next object of attack by the defense. It was expected that this line of assault would begin at today's session of the trial.

Since the prosecution rested more than a week ago every witness who testified was placed on the stand by the defense with the hope of impeaching the veracity of Franklin. Practically the same number of witnesses, about fifteen, will be produced to attack the credibility of Herrington. The first of these was expected to be Police Sergeant Cavanaugh of Venice, where Mr. Darrow has lived since the McNamara trial.

The most damaging evidence given against Darrow by Herrington was his statement that Darrow had shown him a roll of bills said to have contained $10,000 with the remark that if "he could reach several jurors J. B. McNamara would never be convicted."

OBITUARY.

Celina E. Sherman. Utter's Corners, July 13.—Celina E. Sherman was born in the town of Homer, Courtland county, N. Y., December 3rd, 1832, and died at the home of her brother, C. H. Sherman, July 9th, 1912. In 1844 she came with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Erasmus Sherman to Wisconsin and located on a farm one mile from Utter's Corners, where she spent the remainder of her life. Twenty-eight years ago her brother, C. H. Sherman lost his wife and he was left with four small children to care for. She with cheerful heart and willing hands to administer to their needs, trying as best she could to fill the mother's place in the home. Quiet and unassuming in disposition her chief pleasure seemed to derive from administering to the happiness of others. Six years ago she suffered a severe attack of la grippe from which she never fully recovered, and the past four years she has been helpless, but has been tenderly and faithfully cared for by her brother, C. H. Sherman, and niece, Miss Edna Sherman.

The funeral was held from the Utter's Corners church Thursday afternoon. Rev. Samuel Lugg of White water assisted by Rev. W. T. Dunley of Richmond officiating. Rev. Lugg spoke from the text, "She has done what she could," and showed how fittingly the text applied to the works of the departed. The remains were laid at rest in the Utter's cemetery. Aca and William Doid, C. L. Hockett, Thomas Samuels, Frank Bagley and Bert Pitt, nephews of the deceased acted as pall bearers. She leaves two brothers, C. H. Sherman, with whom she lived, and Andrew Sherman who lives at Ainsworth, Iowa, and a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn.

Those from away who attend the funeral were Mrs. D. T. Wilkins of Janesville, William Holsinger and family of Palmyra, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Hackett and Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Bagley and son of Fort Atkinson, Misses Mary and Harriet Hull of Delavan and Mr. Milburn Nyblue of Chicago.

Bessie Elizabeth Macafee. Bessie Elizabeth Macafee, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Macafee, was born at Allen Grove, June 9th, 1902, and died July 9, 1912. Feb. 9th, 1911, she was taken to her bed with tuberculosis of the hip. April 10th she underwent an operation at her home and it was found necessary to remove her hip joint and a few inches of bone, since then she grew gradually worse. All that was possible was done for her, but to no avail. She was a very sweet and affectionate child and loved by all who knew her. She leaves to mourn her loss a mother, father, one sister Mary and one brother Leo, besides a host of relatives and friends.

Mrs. Nellie Sherwood. News of the death of Mrs. Nellie Sherwood, a sister in law of Mrs. E. R. Winslow of this city, whose husband died here five years ago, has been received from Aurora where she has made her home since her husband's death. Mrs. Sherwood was one of the most popular teachers in the East Aurora grade schools and was to have been made principal of Rube Marquard, mighty twirler of the New York Giants, is not averse to making a few honest pennies on the side occasionally. The other day he took a run up into Connecticut and appeared as the stellar attraction at a ball game. Marquard pitched one inning for the Port Chester team against the Bronx Independents. Of the three unfortunate men who faced him, two fanned and one went out on a pop fly. Then the Rube retired from the game, took off his uniform and collected the day's receipts.

The Brown University baseball team has recently sent three of its brightest stars into major leagues. They are Kenneth L. Nash, captain and shortstop of the Brown team, who has signed with the Cleveland Naps; Joseph H. Conzelman, a righthander, and Edward E. Warner, a southpaw, both of whom have signed with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

These youngsters fairly covered themselves over with glory at Brown this spring. It was their superb playing which enabled the Brown team to win its series with Yale and Harvard, and take one game played with Pennsylvania.

Another Cy Young, who stands six feet, six inches and is therefore tall enough to grab almost anything that the ordinary batter could send into the field, has been signed by President Comiskey of the Chicago White Sox. Young was obtained from the Stevens Point, (Wis.) club after he had pitched his ninth consecutive shut-out game. He joins the South Side team on its return from the east.

The town of Wilkesbarre, Pa., will soon witness what should prove to be the most hotly contested ball game ever staged. The baseball diamond will take over the functions of a court there in connection with the conviction of thirty tramps recently arrested by the police of Plymouth borough. When the tramps were arraigned before Burgess W. D. Morris, the burgess, who is a baseball enthusiast, ordered that the men be divided into two equal squads, from which teams are to be selected to play a nine-inning game on the town common. The winning squad is to go free, but the losers will be required to pound stone for two days.

"It will be a great game," declared the burgess. "I am anxious to see how well men can play the national game when their liberty depends upon the outcome."

of Brown, with Cleveland and Warner, of Brown, with Pittsburgh.

Several minor leagues divide their season, the team at the top of the first half of the season plays for the championship of the league. Among the teams that have won their right to contend for the pennant at the close of season are: Jacksonville, in the South Atlantic League; Salem, in the Ohio and Pennsylvania League; Selma, in the Southeastern League; Cleburne, in the South Central League; Wichita Falls, in the Texas-Oklahoma League and Vicksburg in the Cotton States League.

Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra.

The following appreciation of Emil Oberhofer, Conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, by Charles E. Watt, Editor of Music News, Chicago, whose criticisms and opinions are recognized the musical world over, is but one of many tributes paid to the man who has brought the famous Minneapolis organization to its unquestioned place as one of the greatest orchestras of America and the world.

"Minneapolis is fortunate indeed in the possession of Emil Oberhofer, as director of the symphony orchestra of that city, and will be more so if she retains his distinguished services indefinitely, for it would seem that the very greatest arena was none too fine for his efforts and either New York or Chicago might well be proud to possess his influence.

Mr. Oberhofer is the most temperamental leader in America today. Time was when this honor easily fell to Walter Damrosch, but this time is now of the past and Emil Oberhofer stands today head and shoulders above any of his contemporaries in the wisdom and the compelling force with which he reads his program and sways his audiences.

All over the country, wherever the Minneapolis orchestra has appeared, Oberhofer is hailed as the last word in poetical interpretation, and not alone is this true, but he is known everywhere as a solid musician, to whom the reading of the classics has become an open book and who sees

ENTERTAINING CONVENTIONS.
With the presence here today of the Wisconsin Society of Veterinary Graduates in their twenty-third semi-annual convention, the city is again entertaining a state-wide gathering of representative men in their communities. Next year the United Commercial Travelers have designated Janesville as their convention city and other state societies may follow the lead and come to the Bower City in the near future. The recent state convention of the Fraternal Order of Eagles demonstrated that Janesville can care for the largest kind of a crowd with ease and the fact should be advertised throughout the state. Janesville is a good host to strangers and with the Auditorium at the disposal of the larger gatherings and numerous smaller halls suitable for ordinary meetings it can accommodate any organization in the state that decides to pay it a visit. Spread the glad tidings throughout the state and then get busy and bring the conventions along.

POLITICAL GOSSIP.
That Senator La Follette will not permit to pass the revolt to his authority displayed by Governor McGovern at the Chicago convention is most certain. Whether the discipline will take the form of placing a candidate in the field against him at the coming primaries or by throwing strength against him at the November election, remains to be seen. Already rumors of Lt. Governor Tom Morris being the La Follette candidate are heard and papers calling upon him to become a candidate have even been circulated in the state capital under McGovern's own nose, as it were. It has also been suggested that Mr. Torrens from the northern part of the state may run and that Mitchell of Racine would like to shy his castor into the ring if given an opportunity. Meantime the democrats, the "progressive Aylward-Davies faction," are working hand and glove with McGovern to save his political hide by securing the nomination of Schmitz and the defeat of Judge Karel at the September primaries.

HIS MARK.
The Christian Science Monitor takes up the discovery of the national bureau of education, in their search of the colonial records, that our ancestors were really illiterate. This they found was true of the landed people of the thirteen colonies. In discussing this interesting discovery the Monitor says:
"If they, with their larger incomes and higher social position, were thus limited in scholastic accomplishments, what must have been the state of folk who never were called upon to sign wills, deeds, mortgages and similar documents implying thrift and business ability? Today, to be forced to register as 'John Doe X' (his mark) is humiliation for a man in most communities of most regions of the North. Of white adults thus handicapped a majority would be found to be of foreign birth and not long in the country. But there was a time when 40 per cent of the men and 75 per cent of the women in some of the colonies could not sign legal documents without use of the 'mark.' Where a colony like Massachusetts invested in schools almost as soon as it had any political life, the outcome was registered in a literate population, able not only to sign business documents but also to formulate them and to live up to their provisions.
"A new era opens for youth or man, girl or woman, when the art of writing is mastered and self-expression begins, however crudely. Character as well as thought expands when a slave, servant, menial or any subordinate personality in the social structure, passes that stage when he must depend on others to write his name and does it for himself. His first personal signature unfolded is the key to a new period of mental and moral acquisition. Woman, later than man, came into this birthright in America; but having once won it, she now is forging ahead at a relatively higher rate."

PORTUGAL'S TROUBLES.
The Portuguese government is forced to admit that northern Portugal has many royalists in arms. Some of the rebel bands are large and increasing rapidly in size and strength. Good authorities estimate the sentiment of that part of the country at nine-tenths monarchical, not so much from any love of kings as on account of the extreme unpopularity of the present government.
In the vicinity of Lisbon, where the existing government is most thoroughly entrenched, there have been small risings against the republic and in the capital itself outbreaks of hostility to the rulers of the country are frequent. All of the conditions indicate that the civil war is on, instead of mere local disturbances.
It is all as natural as it is unfair. No government could make Portugal prosperous and reasonably free from debt and extreme poverty. But without such changes for the better the country can never be content under any administration. It is a situation perfectly adapted to fomenting revolts and keeping the government insecure and greatly hampered in trying to bring about better conditions for the masses.
If the monarchists could overthrow the republic they would never be able to satisfy the demands of the people. If they were to restore the kingdom they could not keep it from falling again, before long, under the weight of public condemnation for failing to do what is beyond the power of any rulers of a country desperately involved in debt and desperately poor.

They tell the story of a Wisconsin editor, head of a newspaper that makes some pretensions, too, writing in his editorial columns that he wished the subscribers would "pay up," in peanuts if they wished to. One of his readers took him up, literally, and paid up in ten dollars worth of "gubbers," and the editorial force had to move out of their office until the janitor could find room for them to work.
"Dad Bill" Bailey of Texas has again broken forth under the stress of the opportunity to denounce William Howard Taft for his interest in the Lorimer case, which interest Mr. Bailey says aided in unseating the Illinois senator. Bailey never loses an opportunity to stand in the limelight despite the fact he has been mixed up with the oil trust.

The Beloit school census does not show as large a population, according to estimates, as did the government census two years ago. Has the Line City begun to lose its citizens, or what is the trouble?
Now the labor leaders are denouncing "Bill" Flinn of Pittsburgh as an enemy to organized labor, and Flinn is Roosevelt's Pennsylvania state manager, too—the man who has Pennsylvania in his pocket, so to speak.
When the next Olympiad comes round many of the stars of the Stockholm games will be out of the running, but a new American crop will be ready to take the places left vacant in a team of champions.
Henry Cochems still insists that Roosevelt will carry Wisconsin although he only knows one man in the state who will support him—Henry Cochems.
There can't be any doubt that Governor Marshall is the real thing as a democrat of the old, Jeffersonian school. He chews tobacco.
Somebody should get a stepladder and look through the transom. Chancellor Day hasn't been heard from for at least three weeks.
It is said that there are 50,000 windowless rooms in New York. And New York hasn't many militant lady suffragists, either.

Heat and rain make the prize combination for growing crops if the mixing is done carefully, with neither in excess.

ADVERTISING AND CANNING
[By W. C. Kenaga.]
Men would ten times rather buy canned fruit than to can fruit, when they remember what canning season meant in their boyhood.
Thanks to advertising, the canning season today does not mean what it once did. Advertising always creates more business and competition. Advertising then is responsible in a large measure for the many time-saving devices which simplify canning.
Right now the hardware stores, groceries, department stores and fruit dealers are advertising canning goods.
The old screw-top jar has been succeeded by one that closes easily and quickly with one motion of the hand. The aluminum kettle has supplanted the porcelain-lined iron kettle and the graniteware; sterilizers, pitters, parers, eyers are cheap and useful.
Before you go at your canning take a run through the advertising columns of the Gazette and see what there is to save you time and to make your success surer.

Heart to Heart Talks.
By EDWIN A. NYE.
A PREACHER PESSIMIST.
Rev. R. J. Campbell, a London preacher, thinks the world is growing no better.
He says there is no reason for human existence, and all the ages of progress have cost more than they have come to.
He says we are no better off than Egypt and Rome because we have the same battles to fight between right and wrong; the same struggles to endure against the spirit of creed and selfishness.
Cheer up, Mr. Campbell.
What hope of the race can there be save in these very struggles?
Cannot he see on every page of history, especially during the past 100 years, the tremendous strides made in humanitarian progress?
Has not slavery almost disappeared from the face of the earth?
Can he not see on every hand the rising walls of asylums and homes for the friendless and children and the aged, hospitals of every sort, free clinics, juvenile courts? Cannot he see what science is doing for husbandry and the household—cheering the loves of humans and giving every man a higher standard of living and a better chance?
Cannot he see the disappearance of landlordism and the old age pensions and the compulsory insurance of employees in Europe? Or the enforcement of employers' liability and child labor laws in America?
Can he not see the new spirit of Asia, awakening and rubbing its eyes to its opportunities? Think of it! China with a constitutional government; Turkey tolerant.
Can he not see that the spirit of the Christ is permeating the earth as a heaven? Should a minister of the master deity his own gospel and its power to accomplish?
True, the poor we have always with us. And oppression and tyranny and injustice, but—
The facts are known and understood and to know and understand is to argue speedily cure.
True, men still toil in dark tunnels underground and children are made old by long hours and a pitiful wage. And true that trust manipulators still spin their webs like great spiders and levy toll upon the people. And corrupt jurists twist the laws of the land.
Yes, but—
Note what has already been accomplished. And humanity is yet only half awake.
Why, Mr. Preacher, your Christ has never had a fair chance at this cruel world. And never fear: his spirit is unquenchable.

What Makes a Woman.
One hundred and twenty pounds, more or less, of bone and muscle don't make a woman. It's a good foundation. Put into it health and strength and she may rule a kingdom. But that's just what Electric Bitters give her. Thousands bless them for overcoming fainting and dizzy spells and for dispelling weakness, nervousness, backache and tired, listless, worn out feeling.
"Electric Bitters have done me a world of good," writes Eliza Pool, Depew, Okla., "and I thank you, with all my heart, for making such a good medicine." Only 50c. Guaranteed by Peoples' Drug Co.

Genuine Delights.
Pounding the eternal daylight out of a piece of high-cost-of-living beef-steak with a potatoe masher.
Having the butcher hand you back too much change.
Saying $1.78 by being invited to dine out Sunday.
Getting a check for $200 from a magazine story you had forgotten all about. (This never happened.)
Meeting an old friend from the home town who refrains from referring to the time that you didn't have a cent.
Meeting a music teacher who can talk about something else.

What Drives Newspaper Men Crazy.
"Where do you get all of your ideas. Clip 'em out of the other papers?"
"It is true that your wife writes all of your stuff?"
"Why don't you write a play?"
"Huh, you have a snap. All you got to do is to sit at a desk five or six hours a day."
"I saw that joke of yours 19 years ago in Hostetter's almanac."
"My kid said the funniest thing the other day. You oughta use it."
"Why don't you roast the gas company once in a while?"
"How much do you get a week for workin' on a newspaper. I suppose you have lots of things given to you."
"Most all of your stuff's sent in ain't it?"

Hints to Lovelorn Gents.
Send her a large bunch of violets every day. Then you will be perfectly safe, for you will never have enough money to get married on.
Never lie about your salary, for when she marries you and finds out the truth, well—don't lie about your salary, that's all.
A woman can get along with a $4 hat when she's single, but her ideas change when she is married.
If you want to win her in a hurry pay no attention to her at all, but fuss around with some other skirt of whom she is jealous.
According to Uncle Abner. Them dog-lovin' wimmies. I think, are a shine.
The lips that touch puddles Shall never touch mine.
It's a pretty poor politician who can't predict who is going to be elected if he is at it long enough beforehand so that everybody will forget it.
A great man is discussed pro and con, but, after all, what is said is mostly "con."
A feller that has got brains will get by and a feller that hasn't won't, and that is about all there is to it.
Money is not the whole thing in this life. No, indeed, it is not more than nine-tenths of the whole thing.
The quiet feller is the best friend, for he is the one that will stick after all the rest of 'em have made their excuses, put on their hats and gone home.
There never was a curly-haired feller who ever had much patience.
A good many fellers who will go all to pieces if they have a toe ache will walk up to the cannon's mouth or jump into a burning building to save a life without giving the matter a second's thought.

Advantages Here Now:
Cool atmosphere, a comfortable rest room where you may read or write to your heart's content and plenty of light and air. These are a few of the warm weather features of Janesville's biggest and best store that have gained for it the name of Janesville's popular place of rest and recreation for tired shoppers during the summer months. Above all, tower the wonderful bargains assembled at about half the regular prices as a result of the advantage taken of a backward season, that has compelled manufacturers to make unprecedented sacrifices of the highest class of warm weather goods. Our saving on recent purchases amounted to thousands of dollars, and that's what we're saving the people of Janesville in the sales in progress today, tomorrow and until every dollar's worth of merchandise is in the hands of an appreciative shopping public.

A lady just told me that her new teeth fit just fine. She thought the world of them.

ADmits VIOLATION OF SPEED ORDINANCE

Bradley Conrad Fined $2 and Costs in Municipal Court This Morning — Killed Bull-dog.

Bradley Conrad pleaded guilty in the municipal court this morning to driving an automobile on North Academy street last night at a speed in excess of ten miles an hour in violation of the city ordinance and was fined $2 and costs, amounting to $4.00. Conrad was placed under arrest by Patrolman Sam Brown at about 9:00 o'clock, near the corner of Milwaukee street. He claims that Conrad was running at twenty miles an hour. Conrad, however did not think he was going that fast but admitted that he was going at the rate of fifteen miles. The machine struck and killed a bull dog belonging to Hugh Wagner, and according to the officer nearly struck two little girls. Wagner demands pay for his dog which he claims to have paid $75 for.

BIG PICNIC FOR ALL WORKERS SUGGESTED

"Janesville Day" Outing, in Which All Stores in City Would Participate Being Discussed.

That the merchants of the city give one day, to be called "Janesville Day," to a picnic in which they and their employees would spend the time at a picnic at some nearby park, is a tentative plan that is being discussed among some of the business men of the city. The affair, if it were carried out, would take the place of the annual Grocers' picnic and would be similar to the outings of that group of merchants, on a larger scale. Last year when the Grocers' picnic was held, the merchants closed their establishments at noon to allow their employees to attend the picnic, and at that time it was suggested that in 1912, a picnic be held in which all the business houses might be allowed to participate. The subject has not been broached generally but there has been some discussion of it, and steps may be taken to push the enterprise. It has been suggested that the outing be held about the second week in August.

MONEY IS RECEIVED FOR PENSION FUND

$760.03 Received by County Treasurer as Rock County's Contribution to Retirement Fund.

Checks received by the county treasurer from towns, cities and villages where teachers have elected to come under the teachers' pension act passed at the last session of the Wisconsin legislature, aggregating $760.03 which will be forwarded to the state department as Rock county's contribution to the teachers' retirement fund on or before August 1.

All four cities in the county have teachers who have elected to come under the law. By far the largest amount of money kept from the teachers' salaries and turned over to the county treasurer, is from Janesville the amount being $462.07, or over one half the total. Beloit's collection is $172.25, Edgerton, $37.35, and Evansville, $35.50 or the smallest amount of any of the returns, cities, and villages or townships.

The village of Clinton was the only village in the county to make a cash return toward the fund. The following townships sent in checks: Fulton, Spring Valley, Lima, Harmony, Porter, Avon and Johnston. The other townships and villages evidently have no teachers who have elected to come under the act or else the authorities have neglected to make reports, which were due July 15. The county superintendent has received reports from most of the districts in the county, however.

INCOME TAX BOARD OF REVIEW UNNAMED

With Date for Meeting Less Than Two Weeks Away Tax Commission Still Delays Appointments.

With the date for the meeting of the board of review for the income tax assessment of Rock county less than two weeks away, Monday, July 29th, the state tax commission has thus far failed to name the three members of which it shall be composed besides the county income tax assessor, F. A. Taylor. The county clerk is secretary of the board.

Mr. Taylor stated today that he expected to hear from the commission relative to the men who would be appointed sometime during the present week. He has already sent out notices as to the date of the meeting of the board although the personnel is not yet known.

It will be the purpose of the board of review to go over the income tax assessment rolls and to hear any and all complaints which may be brought. They will continue in session until their work is ended.

All sessions of the board will be held behind closed doors and the members are pledged to secrecy in regard to the proceedings. The figures are all a matter of strict confidence and their publication or divulgence in any way is prohibited by law under penalty of a heavy fine.

After the board has completed its work a report is sent to the state tax commission for their approval after which the income tax assessment roll for the county is made out by the county clerk with the assistance of the income tax assessor.

SALESMAN GOES OTHERS ONE BETTER

A mouse trap salesman who is canvassing this city with his device goes all previous efforts along this line one better in that he carries real live mice with him to demonstrate the efficiency of his trap.

The salesman has a trap with some unique attachments and in order that it can be properly shown he carries two white mice with him and as soon as they see the trap on the floor they run into it and do much in effecting sales.

The trap is so contrived that when one after another the mice get inside there is a slide into a tank of water and the mice are drowned.

The trap automatically resets itself and twenty mice have been caught and drowned in one trap in a single night.

In the demonstration saw dust is used instead of water and the little fellows drop into this and are ready to do the trick over again as fast as they are released.

Emerson appreciated the importance of efficiency in such an humble instrument as a mouse trap that he wrote: "If a man can preach a better sermon, write a better book, or make a better mouse trap than his neighbor, though he build his house in the woods, the world will make a beaten path to his door."

FAVOR CREOSOTE BLOCK PAVEMENT FOR BRIDGE
Council May Decide to Use This Material for Deck on Milwaukee Street Structure.

Creosote block laid on a base of creosoted block is being favorably considered for paving the Milwaukee street bridge. The council has not yet decided what course it will take in making repairs to that structure but it is very probable that these materials will be used. The Board of Public Works, which made an inspection of the bridge last Saturday found the piles in generally good condition and good for fifteen years more of service. A few bad ones were found but these can be repaired at small expense. The deck which was put in about three years ago is in bad shape. It is probable that the council will at an early meeting provide for its replacement.

WOMAN'S PAGE

MARY ELLEN'S WAY

She Secures The Services Of Mr. Elizabeth Jane To Spade Up Her Pansy Bed

MARY ELLEN was trying unsuccessfully to dig up a corner of the flower bed.

"Isn't that rather hard work for you?" inquired Mr. Elizabeth Jane, coming to the fence.

"Yes, it is," said Mary Ellen ruefully. "But Mr. Mary Ellen forgot to do it last night, and I want to get these seeds planted today. I am going away and it will be too late when I get back. Sometimes I do envy men their strong muscles." She gave a futile dash on the earth with the spade.

"Let me do it for you," said Mr. Elizabeth Jane, lightly vaulting the fence.

"Oh, no! That would be an imposition. I couldn't think of it. It's awfully hard work."

"Not at all," said Mr. Elizabeth Jane, taking the spade.

"It's certainly awfully good of you!" Her glances expressed admiration.

Mr. Elizabeth Jane caught the glance and dug harder.

"This isn't work," he said gaily.

"It seemed so to me," replied Mary Ellen, sitting down on the grass wearily. "My hands are blistered and my arms ache. But goodness, it doesn't seem any effort to you. You must be awfully strong."

"I have some muscle," replied Mr. Elizabeth Jane, wiping the sweat from his brow.

"I guess you must go in for physical exercise, don't you? You have such broad shoulders and that well-set-up look of an athlete. I certainly do admire it in a man."

Mr. Elizabeth Jane made the dirt fly.

"I shall make Mr. Mary Ellen quite jealous when he comes home. He wouldn't have done it half so well as you."

Mr. Elizabeth Jane leaned on his spade and breathed hard.

"It's good exercise, isn't it?" continued Mary Ellen sweetly. "I always say, that if we'd think lots of things we do as exercise that is good for us, instead of as work, we really would get a lot of pleasure out of them."

"Yes," said Mr. Elizabeth Jane, somewhat dubiously. He had just caught sight of Mrs. Elizabeth Jane watching him from the window.

"I am going to make you some ice-cold lemonade," said Mary Ellen, rising from the ground.

"Oh, don't trouble yourself," said Mr. Elizabeth Jane, conscious of Mrs. Elizabeth Jane's vigilant eye.

"It's no trouble. And after that hard work you've been doing for me, I wish there was more I could do for you."

"It hasn't been hard," said Mr. Elizabeth Jane, slowly straightening up.

"It is hard, though you did it so easily. I never could have done it at all. And I certainly am a thousand times obliged." In a few minutes she was back with a tinkling ice-cold pitcher of lemonade and sparkling thin glasses.

"That does taste good," exclaimed Mr. Elizabeth Jane, draining a glass at one draught.

"I don't know how I shall ever thank you for spading up that bed for me," said Mary Ellen, pouring him a second glass.

"Don't mention it," replied Mr. Elizabeth Jane. "It was a pleasure."

As Mr. Elizabeth Jane enters his house, Mrs. Elizabeth Jane exclaimed:

"It's a wonder you wouldn't do little work like that at home. I've seen at you for weeks to dig up a flower-bed for me, but it will never be done until I do it myself, I see that."

Mr. Elizabeth Jane sat down somewhat stiffly and reached for the newspaper. He thought of the pleasant hour with Mrs. Mary Ellen and of the lemonade. He wondered how it is that he had never noticed his figure was athletic.

"Are you going to dig up that bed for me or not?" demanded Mrs. Elizabeth Jane.

"If you insist upon it, I suppose I have to," he replied wearily.

Heart and Home Problems

MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Do you think that biting your finger nails is a bad habit or the result of nervousness? I have been biting my nails for several years now and cannot stop. Can you advise me how to stop? Is there anything I can use to encourage their growth? The ends are broad. Can I make them taper any way? Thank you.

LORETTA.

It is a very bad habit and one very annoying to others, besides making your hands look most unsightly. Buy a manicure set and get about manicuring your nails. Put a bright polish on them and file them even and smooth. They will look so well that you will hesitate before spoiling them by biting. You can put a little bitter ointment on the ends, so that, if you start to biting, the taste will remind you to stop.

To taper them—it might help a little to pinch the finger tips, using a little cold cream while doing it. Vaseline will make the nails grow, though proper manicuring will do this also and improve the appearance of your fingers marvelously. Use a good hand lotion also, so that the hands will be soft and white, and become a pride to you.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1)—How can I take grease spots out of light tan shoes? (2)—What can I do for a big neck that is getting bigger every day?

(1)—Use alcohol or gasoline, rubbing in toward the center of the spot so it will not spread. More than one application may be needed; or, put fullers earth on spot and hold hot iron over it, repeating until grease is absorbed. (2)—Consult a doctor. There is a remedy, but it it severs that anybody with a trace of heart trouble cannot take it. Or a physician should prescribe.

Dear Mrs. Thompson. My baby's skin is very dry. What will make it soft & smooth? She is five months old. F.S.

Put little olive oil gently into baby's skin.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of sixteen. (1)—How long must I wear dresses? (2)—I am 5 feet 1 inch tall. Am I tall? (3)—How should I dress my hair? (4)—Is it proper to stay out later than 11 o'clock at night? (5)—I am blond and have blue eyes; what color is most becoming to me? (6)—My face is very red. Would deep breathing and exercise my cheeks a good color? (7)—What foods should I avoid? (8)—What should I grow my eyebrows long and silk? (9)—What is the price of an ounce of macerated wax. Is it a beauty? What is Plain Proxine?

DAILY READER.

(1)—Your sheeps. (2)—You are just like a sheep. (3)—A pretty hairdress is two coils low on the neck, with the hair pulling slightly over the ears and a narrow ribbon bandeau. (4)—You should be home at 10 o'clock. (5)—Match your eyes; if brown, some shades of pink. (6)—Exercise outdoors all you can. Sleep with open windows. Remember! breathe deep several times a day. (7)—Bat everything with soap. (8)—Vaseline. (9)—These are adverse products. I do not know anything about them.

Use facial exercise and plenty of good food for your only beautifiers, my dear, if you would get the best result.

HOUSEHOLD TALKS

Hensriett D. Gravel

tions but if from the frequency that it is sought to the dinner either hard on cooking or soggy from standing in the water it was boiled or insipid from lack of seasoning which a few suggestions will not go for.

In the fireplace "field" corn was never intended for table use, it can not be detest from "sweet" corn before it is cooked but after it is cooked it turns yellow and the longer it is boiled or baked the tougher it grows. The housewife can only refuse to buy again from the dealer who sold it to her and even he may not have known the difference.

But corn is delicious, rich and tender and is appearing now on the open markets. It was perfected by Barbanks only a few seasons ago so that many lovers of "corn on the cob" still anticipate tasting this latest improvement.

Corn should be put to cook in briskly boiling water that has been well salted. Every thread of the silky fiber must be removed; whether the husks are left on or not is a matter of taste, many cooks turn the inner husks back, remove the silk, wash the corn and then husk over the kernels, saying that the corn is sweeter when so cooked.

Twenty minutes is ample time for cooking corn as it is done as soon as the milk has thickened and the raw taste is destroyed, longer cooking impairs the flavor and hardens the kernel.

Properly prepared, corn is the best and most appetizing vegetable we have and it is never so good canned, in the winter, as it is fresh from the field. Since it contains a considerable amount of sugar it should be cooked as soon after gathering as possible, as it loses its sweetness by standing.

The fastidious have been heard to say that it should be eaten from the cob as the sisters in Cranford ate their oranges behind a screen, but we may now enjoy corn-on-the-cob and still remain in evidence if we have the new corn glass or holders that are made to hold the ear in position.

They are of silver or plated ware and quite an addition to the dinner service and protect the fingers and the napery.

An exchange asks "what has become of the old-fashioned woman who cooked in paper bags?" She still exists but has laid the cookery bags aside until cooler weather permits her to use the oven more frequently, but roasting ears are quite delectable baked in a cookery bag, retaining all their moisture and fine flavor in a way that would be quite impossible roasted in an open oven. Do it this way:

Remove the husks and threads from the requisite number of ears and butter, sprinkle liberally with salt, and pepper and slip into a cookery bag, seal and place on a rack in a moderately hot oven for twenty minutes. Do not open the bag until ready to serve.

The only objection to cooking corn in the above manner is that every one wants two helpings and there will be none left to combine with tomatoes or to make into delicious succotash with the addition of a few beans or to scallop with cream or make into a pudding with two eggs, a cup of milk, a tablespoon each of butter and sugar and a little seasoning. But never mind, there are a few of the ears left of the dozen you bought, and these may be made into corn oysters or patties for breakfast, for no matter how fond you may be of corn on the ear it is "not the thing" to serve it so, at the early morning meal.

Corn Oysters: Cut the corn from the cob and to every cupful of kernels add two tablespoons of flour, one beaten egg, one tablespoon of cream, seasoning to taste. Mix to a batter and pour in buttered patty pans and bake or fry by spoonfuls in hot fat or in a little butter.

The KITCHEN CABINET

LET the one who sighs for comfort. Feel a hand-grasp true; It will cheer the way and surely Can't impoverish you.

Lives are human, though so often We disfigure our pain. Some are hungering for your comfort Give and give again.

SOME WAYS WITH FRUIT.

There is no better way to serve the rosy currant than rolling in sugar and well chilled; but as one likes variety, here is a very nice.

Ripe Currant Pie.—Bake a shell of pastry and fill with the following: A cup of crushed currants, a cup of sugar, two eggs, two tablespoons of water and one of flour. Beat the yolks of the eggs with flour and water, mix with the fruit, sugar, and stew until smooth. Bake in the pastry shell and cover with a meringue made of the whites of the eggs and two tablespoons of sugar; brown and serve either hot or cold.

Raspberry Whip.—Mash a cup and a half of raspberries; add a cup of pulverized sugar, a pinch of salt and the white of an egg and beat all together thirty minutes. Serve heaped on a platter surrounded with whipped cream. Serve with macaroons.

The Evening Chit-Chat

ENVY.

HOW much of the happiness in this world is built on the very ugly foundation of other people's envy!

That is a very disturbing and disheartening thought which comes to me whenever I have occasion to realize how largely the value we place on things is determined, not by their intrinsic beauty or utility, but rather by their rarity.

Luxuries would not be luxuries if everyone could have them. "Automobiles are so common nowadays," says one of the rich folks who was among the first to own a car, "that there is no fun in having one. Why, every plumber and copper penny clerk has his machine. I think I shall sell mine." You see, a large proportion of his pleasure in owning a car consisted in having something that other people could not have.

Would the woman who declares she loves her diamonds because of their fire and sparkle continue to love them if a gigantic diamond mine were discovered and diamonds became inexpensive and correspondingly common? Indeed she wouldn't. She would forget all about that fire and sparkle which she declared was so surpassingly beautiful, and would want some other gem which common people could not afford. The fact that it had less intrinsic beauty would probably mean nothing to her.

A plain girl longs with all her heart to be pretty, and thinks she would be perfectly happy if she might appeal to her and say, "I will make you very pretty, and I will make you beautiful." Do you think the plain girl would be satisfied? Do you think she'd be delighted at the good fortune which had come to all her sisters through her? Or would she be disappointed at the fairy godmother's catholicity of giving? I'll leave it to your knowledge of human nature to decide which.

I doubt if there is any motive which is behind more of our thoughts and words and acts than this desire to outshine other people, to have something which other people want and cannot have, in short to be the object of other people's envy.

It stands behind a woman's desire to have a richer cake at her party than Mrs. So-and-So served at her function. It spurs the great statesman in his struggle for fame, that last infirmity of noble minds.

But its commonness is no excuse. To my mind it is one of the ugliest and most ignoble passions in the world.

To teach myself to value things for their intrinsic beauty or utility, and for the actual happiness I can get out of them and give with them, rather than for their rarity or the envy I can excite with them—this is one of my dearest ideals. Will you adopt it with me? Or perhaps you are one of the rare souls who have already attained it.

A WOMAN'S OBSERVATIONS

Edna K. Woolley

slop the gravy on the tablecloth. They'll take away your appetite, anyway, toothpick or no toothpick. But for that reason, we don't banish from the table the food they so objectionably eat.

The toothpick has come into prominence.

Since the University of Chicago barred it at meals, as vulgar, the humble toothpick has been the subject of much comment, and it has been discovered that various hotels and restaurants have, for some time, ruled out the little wooden stick that is, in fact, a friend in need.

But the toothpick, hasn't been relegated to the cashier's desk in all cases, because it offended the patrons of a restaurant. The element of economy has entered here, as elsewhere. "Save the pennies," you know. As the proprietor of one medium-priced restaurant elucidated, when asked what had been done with the little glass of "picks" which had graced each table—

"Couldn't afford to keep 'em there. Why, a man would order a 25-cent meal and then take off with a half-dozen toothpicks! It cost me some money, I tell you, to keep the tables supplied at that rate. So I put a few in a dish on the cashier's desk, and when the toothpick bog comes along the cashier'll fix him with a glass, or maybe ask him if he's in the lumber business. Then, when they're on the cashier's desk, most folks forget to take one, but at the table they never do and usually waste three or four."

I have referred to the toothpick as "a friend in need."

"It is. Anybody who has suffered with a piece of steak wedged in between two bicuspids in the southern corner of his jaw, will agree with me. Then there are heavy seeds, orange fibers and other bits of food that lodge between and under one's imperfect molars and which cause increasing discomfort until the friendly toothpick is employed—for one can't always get next to a toothbrush, and everyone will agree that anybody with the habit of "sucking his teeth" ought to be done to death on the spot. Any wielder of a toothpick to this friend who annoys us at tavern or in street car, in the theater, even at church—whenever and wherever the spirit moves him.

Some dentists have declared that the soft wooden toothpick is a harmful instrument—that silvers are apt to become detached and take up their quarters between the teeth. They recommend dental floss as a substitute.

Dental floss is undeniably good. But the use of dental floss after a restaurant meal, as a rule, would be quite impracticable. It wouldn't be in company. The process couldn't be hidden with a napkin, as in the case of a toothpick. And, even though some dentists have inveighed against the wooden subject of this commentary, it must be admitted that the conscientious user of it is far better off than he had allowed particles of food to remain in his mouth, not only to distress him, but to decay and endanger both his teeth and his health.

It is said that every good thing carried to an extreme becomes an evil. The toothpick is a good thing, but certain extreme users of it have pronounced its doom as a public benefactor.

The vulgar have made the toothpick vulgar. They have used it in manner disgusting to those of finer sensibilities. They are the same sort of people who gulp their food, gurgie their soup, sizzle their coffee and

DINNER STORIES

Skibo Castle has entertained many prominent politicians. Among these is Lord Morley, with whom the Laird of Skibo has enjoyed many a verbal tussle. It is said that one morning Lord Morley was asked by a fellow guest at the castle how he had been spending his time. "Oh," he replied with a smile, "just exposing some of Carnegie's sophisms." Half an hour later, some one asked Lord Carnegie if he had seen Lord Morley. "I guess he's laid up for repairs," was the reply. "I've been arguing with him."

DIET AND HEALTH HINTS

AVOIDING TOO MUCH PROTEIN.

A reader of the Diet Hints who has been endeavoring to determine the effect of adopting an ideal ration, such as he formerly used in the successful raising of hogs, finds that the chief difficulty is to avoid taking too much protein, according to the latest approved standard of ten per cent. If the system long recommended in these hints, and approved by many, is adopted, there will be no difficulty in establishing an ideal ration; acid fruits or salad only in the morning, cereals with or without a few nuts at the principal meal, at ten if convenient, and sugar fruits or rice with cream or baked potato or toast in the evening, with a tablespoonful of olive oil and a glass of buttermilk on retiring.

(Copyright, 1911, by Joseph B. Rowley.)

A Philadelphia woman who has experienced much trouble with her servants, and who recently found herself, while indisposed, entirely without domestic help, was obliged to send her husband to an employment agency one morning with a view to obtaining the needed help.

The husband returned about 1 in the afternoon wearing a most distressed expression.

"What's the matter dear?" asked the wife. "Were there no servants at the employment agency?"

"There were slathers of 'em," returned the husband grimly, "but unfortunately, they had all worked for us before."

Clem Hoppe and a business associate had to wait in a junction town in Ohio for a train at about the time when they were perishing for food. They took a look at the hotel, didn't like it and started out to find a restaurant. A small one loomed up on one street, and as they entered it Hoppe remarked: "In any dump like this the main idea is ham and eggs." They ordered ham and eggs, and the proprietor was half way to the kitchen when he came back and said: "I've just got some nice porterhouse steaks in." The travelers looked at each other for support and changed their minds. Replied the landlady: "What will you have—the 15 or 20-cent ones?"

Women of Janesville Marvel at Valeska Suratt's Beauty Secrets

Beauty Chat by Valeska Suratt, the World's Famous Self-Made Beauty Actress.

My dear, I have stated at the gladness which I have brought to so many of my sisters. I little realized how great would be the response to my little beauty-chat which have been appearing in these columns every Wednesday. In this mail I see gratitude in every line, not only for the secrets themselves which I have given them, but because of the splendid results which they have enjoyed from them.

From the first, of course, I knew what these results would be. It was impossible for it to be otherwise. As I open my mail, I read a dear letter from Beulah, which reads: "This morning I was astonished to find that my hair, which I had been told was beyond repair, was just as happy as a bird. You are my dearest benefactor."

Another bubbles forth this way from Annabelle: "My sister used to think she had a uniquely complexion. Mine was only ordinary. Now, in only two weeks' time mine makes hers look almost like a pearl. Mine is a delightfully clear rose. I am just as happy as a bird. You are my dearest benefactor."

I am happy for your sake, Beulah and Annabelle, and for all the other dear friends who have shown such confidence in me, and gratitude for what I have endeavored to do.

There have been many requests for a hair-remover which will not burn or irritate the skin. I can do no better than give you what I use myself, and I know you will be just much elated as I was.

"This Hair-remover Leaves the Skin Pure, Clean and Soft, Just Like a Baby's."

at the result after trying nearly everything known. This treatment is remarkable for several reasons. It leaves very little if any trace of that strong odor which makes other depilatories so disagreeable. Besides, it leaves the skin pure, clear and soft, just like a baby's.

At any drug store you should be able to get what is called "sulfur solution." It will cost you one dollar, but it will just you quite a while. Apply this solution (see what it is) to the hair you want removed. Keep it on until it has shivered up. This will take but two or three minutes. Then wipe off with a warm damp cloth and wash the skin with warm water and then apply a face cream. The action of this solution is almost magic.

Many requests have also been received for an ideal shampoo for the hair. No more delightful hair cleanser exists than the following: Dissolve one teaspoonful of egg in half a cup of hot water. When entirely dissolved and the solution has become like warm, pour onto the hair and shampoo in the usual manner. It makes an exquisite lather. After rubbing it well into the scalp so it is perfectly clean, wash the hair thoroughly with plenty of warm water, and rinse with cold water. The condition of the hair after using this shampoo is adorable. No other word can express it. It makes the hair silky, easy to handle and the nates every particle of dirt and grit that accumulates on the hair and scalp. The druggist will let you have the egg for not more than twenty-five cents.

DEBORAH K. asks how to get rid of dandruff. The formula for this appeared in these columns last Wednesday. But will you repeat it?

It is the most effective dandruff remover I have ever known. With a half-pint of water mix half a pint of alcohol. To this add one ounce of benzoin. Shake thoroughly, and it will then be ready to use. If you prefer you can use impure oil, but the cream of the water and alcohol.

The benzoin you get at almost any drug store for more than fifty cents.

The ordinary remedy for dandruff is to use a hair oil which you buy in the stores usually cost you one dollar. But this formula makes one for the price of the best hair remover and it costs you much less than a dollar.

This formula should be applied very freely after brushing the scalp generously for a few minutes all over the head. Rub thoroughly into the scalp with the finger tips.

After a few minutes you will find the dandruff almost completely gone. And it will then vanish permanently.

NAOMI wants to know how to get rid of mucky complexion and the ordinary spotty skin that so many complain of. If Naomi will use my formula she will get the rest of her days. It makes the skin youthful to a remarkable degree and pure and white.

Add two tablespoonfuls of glycerine. Keep stirring while dissolved. If it is all too thick to pour easily from a bottle, stir it down a little with more hot water. The cream will be white and satiny. After bathing in the morning, hold a wet towel to the face, several times for several minutes. Rub this cream on the entire face liberally. Let the cream dry on the face. Repeat this again at night. A good drug store will let you have zintone for about fifty cents.

JUNE BRIDE complains that she has tried many things for freckles without success, but if she will use the following, even her husband will notice the striking difference in a short time:

In one-half pint of boiling water, pour two ounces of turpentine and a half a cup of sugar, all well mixed together. Of this, take two tablespoonfuls three or four times a day in a wine glass of water after your meals. The druggist will let you have the turpentine for a dollar.

Those who will use this will be eloquent in their praises of this remarkable secret. The development will be very materially assisted by massaging the bust with the spot cream mentioned above.

ROCK COUNTY KAREL CLUB IS PROJECTED

Meeting For Purpose of Organization to be Held in Near Future—Sentiment Strong Here.

Rock county supporters of Judge Karel for the Democratic nomination for governor may be organized into a club within the near future, and a meeting for that purpose is now being planned. The feeling is general that the Democrats can win with Judge Karel at the head of the ticket.

SIDEWALK KETCHES.

BRAINS.

(By Howard L. Rann.)

The brain is a neat mechanical contrivance with which people absorb misinformation. With most people it is located in the head, where it keeps up a loud buzzing and prevents the owner from hearing anything but his own voice. The brain is composed of small cells which secrete currents of air and undigested opinions, forming a pleasing medley which are ejected into a conversation at a high rate of speed. After a plain, crude brain has been run through the high school and a college curriculum, it becomes so muscular that it can tackle the dead languages without a can-opener. Some brains are geared higher than others, and do not need to be primed with the comic supplement or lubricated with 49-cent fiction. The largest brain ever produced in this country was the one worn by the late Dan Webster, who always had to sit for his hats. Whenever Dan wanted to use his brain for any purpose he would take off his hat and allow his thoughts to flow in a northwesterly direction in the form of a sixteen-hour discourse upon that sacred instrument, the constitution. The brain of T. Roosevelt is not as large as Dan Webster's, but it is more porous and exudes some of the shortest and most abrupt words in the English language. The college brain is an expensive variety which is sharpened to a high pitch of culture by coming in contact with the home plate and the 100-yard dash, after which it is turned loose on the business world at $5,000 per year.

The legal brain is one which will guarantee to acquire anybody who has not conspired in the presence of a notary public, and is a very profitable style to cultivate. So many people are cultivating the legal headpiece that convictions are becoming fewer and farther between than strawberries in a hotel shortcake. A person is said to have a brain storm when his mind revolves rapidly on its axis and collides violently with the established order. Some brains are like an Arizona river, an inch deep and a mile wide at the mouth, but these are not effective except for political purposes.

The Three Guardsmen

... By ...
ALEXANDRE DUMAS

However in our two friends were mounted, they soon got far in advance of their servants and arrived at Crevecoeur. From a distance they perceived Aramis seated in a melancholy manner at his window.

"Hoi! Ha, Aramis! What are you doing there?" cried they.

"Ah! is that you, D'Artagnan, and you, Athos?" said the young man. "I was reflecting upon the rapidity with which the blessings of this world leave us, and my English horse, which has just disappeared amid a cloud of dust, has furnished me with a living image of the fragility of things of the earth. I have just been duped. Sixty louis for a horse which by the manner in which he goes can do at least five leagues an hour."

D'Artagnan and Athos burst into a loud laugh.

"My dear D'Artagnan," said Aramis, "don't be too angry with me, I beg of you. Necessity has no law. Besides, I am the person punished, as that rascally horse dealer has robbed me of 50 pistoles at least. Ah, you fellows are good managers. You ride on your lackeys' horses and have your own gallant steeds led along carefully by hand at short stages."

At the same instant a market cart, which had for some minutes appeared upon the Avenue, pulled up at the inn, and Planchet and Grimaud got out of it with the saddles on their heads. The cart was going to Paris and had agreed, on condition of being prevented from feeling thirst upon the road, to convey the lackeys and their burdens thither.

"How is all this?" said Aramis, on seeing them arrive. "Nothing but saddles!"

"Now do you understand?" said Athos.

"Oh, yes, all alike. I retained my furniture by instinct. Hola, Bazin! Bring my new saddle and carry it with those of these gentlemen."

They made a halt for an hour to refresh their horses. Aramis discharged his bill, placed Bazin in the cart with his comrades, and they set forward to join Porthos.

They found him up, less pale than when D'Artagnan left him and seated at a table on which, though he was alone, was spread enough for four persons. This dinner consisted of vintages nicely dressed, choice wines and superb fruit.

"Ah," said he, rising, "you come in the nick of time. Gentlemen, I was just beginning the potage, and you will dine with me."

"Do you know what we are eating here?" said Athos, at the expiration of about ten minutes. "We are all eating horseshoes!"

"Eating what?" said D'Artagnan.

"Horseshoes!" said Aramis, with a look of disgust.

Porthos alone made no reply.

"Yes, real horse. Are we not, Porthos, eating a horse—and perhaps his saddle?"

"No, no, gentlemen; I have kept the furniture," said Porthos.

"Well," said Aramis, "we are all alike. One would think we acted upon agreement."

"Then your duchess is still taking the waters?" asked D'Artagnan of Porthos.

"Yes, still," replied Porthos. "And the governor of the province, one of the gentlemen I expected today, seemed to have such a wish for him that I gave him to him."

"Gave him?" cried D'Artagnan.

"Lord! Yes, gave it to him; you can't call it anything but a gift," said Porthos. "For the animal was worth at least 150 louis, and the stingy fellow would only give me 50!"

"Without the saddle?" said Aramis.

"Yes, without the saddle."

"You will please observe, gentlemen," said Athos, "that Porthos has made the best bargain of any of us."

And then commenced a roar of laughter in which they all joined, to the astonishment of poor Porthos; but which was informed of the cause of their hilarity his laughter, according to custom, was more vociferous than anybody's.

On arriving in Paris, D'Artagnan found a letter from M. de Treville, which informed him that, at his request, the king had promised that he should be admitted to the company of the musketeers.

As this was the height of D'Artagnan's worldly ambition, apart, be it well understood, from his desire of finding Mme. Bonacieux, he was full of joy, to seek his comrades, whom he had left only half an hour before, but whom he found very sad and deeply preoccupied. They were assembling in council at the residence of Athos, which always indicated an event of some seriousness. M. de Treville had intimated to them that, it being his majesty's fixed intention to open the campaign on the 1st of May, they must immediately get ready all their appointments.

"And what do you reckon your appointments will cost?" said D'Artagnan.

"Oh, we can scarcely venture to say. We have made our calculations with Spartan economy, and we each require 1,500 livres."

"Four times fifteen make sixty—ah! 6,000 livres," said Athos.

"For my part, I think," said D'Artagnan, "with 1,000 livres each—"

"Stop!" said Porthos. "I have an idea."

"Well, that's something; for my part, I have not the shadow of one," said Athos coolly. "But as to D'Artagnan, the idea of belonging to us, gentlemen, has driven him out of his senses. A thousand livres! For my part, I declare I want 2,000."

"Four times two make eight, then," said Aramis. "It is 8,000 that we want to complete our appointments, of which appointments, it is true, we have already handsome saddles."

"Besides," said Athos, waiting till D'Artagnan, who went to thank M. de Treville, had shut the door, "besides, there is that beautiful ring which beams from the finger of our friend. D'Artagnan is too good a comrade to leave his brothers in embarrassment while he wears the ransom of a king on his finger."

CHAPTER XXIII.

Hunting For Equipments.

THE most preoccupied of the four friends was certainly D'Artagnan. Notwithstanding all his inquiries respecting Mme. Bonacieux, he could obtain no intelligence of her. M. de Treville had spoken of her to the queen; the queen was ignorant where the mercenary young wife was, but had promised to have her sought for.

Athos did not leave his chamber. He made up his mind not to take a single step to provide for his equipment.

"We have still a fortnight before us," said he to his friends. "Well, if at the end of a fortnight I have found nothing, or, rather, if nothing has come to find me, as I am too good a Catholic to kill myself with a pistol bullet, I will seek a good cause of quarrel with four of his eminence's guards or with eight Englishmen. I will fight until one of them has killed me, which, considering the number, cannot fail to happen. It will then be said of me that I died for the king, so that I shall have performed my duty without the expense of equipment."

Porthos continued to walk about with his hands behind him, tossing his head and repeating:

"I shall follow up my idea."

Aramis, anxious and negligently dressed, said nothing.

As Porthos had first found an idea and had thought of it earnestly afterward, he was the first to act. D'Artagnan perceived him one day walking into the church of St. Leu and followed him instinctively. As D'Artagnan took some precautions to conceal himself, Porthos believed he had not been seen. D'Artagnan entered behind him. Porthos went and leaned against the side of a pillar; D'Artagnan, still unperceived, supported himself against the other side of it.

There happened to be a sermon, which made the church very full. Porthos took advantage of this circumstance to ogle the women. Thanks to the care of Mousqueton, the exterior was far from announcing the distress of the interior, and Porthos was still the handsome Porthos.

D'Artagnan observed, on the bench nearest to the pillar against which Porthos leaned, a sort of ripe beauty, rather yellow and rather dry, but erect and haughty, under her black hood. The eyes of Porthos were furiously cast upon this lady and then roved about at large over the nave.

On her side, the lady, who from time to time blushed, darted with the rapidity of lightning a glance toward the discontented Porthos. He, seeing this

Began to make signals to a beautiful lady who was near the choir and who not only was a beautiful lady, but still further no doubt, a great lady, for she had behind her a negro boy, who had brought the cushion on which she knelt, and a female servant.

The lady with the red cushion produced a great effect—for she was very handsome—upon the lady with the black hood, who saw in her a rival really to be dreaded; a great effect upon Porthos, who thought her much more pretty than the lady with the black hood; a great effect upon D'Artagnan, who recognized in her the lady of Meung, of Calais and Dover, whom his persecutor, the man with the scar, had saluted by the name of milady.

D'Artagnan, without losing sight of the lady of the red cushion, continued to watch the proceedings of Porthos, which amused him greatly. He directly guessed that the lady of the black hood was the lawyer's wife mentioned by the luncheon of Chantilly as Porthos' "duchess."

He guessed, likewise, that Porthos was taking his revenge for the defeat of Chantilly, when the woman had proved so refractory with respect to her purse.

The sermon over, the lawyer's wife advanced toward the basin of holy water. Porthos went before her and, instead of a finger, dipped his whole hand in. The procureur smiled, thinking that it was for her that Porthos put himself to this expense, but she was cruelly and promptly undeceived. When she was only about three steps from him he turned his head round, fixing his eyes invariably upon the lady of the red cushion, who had risen and was approaching, followed by her black boy and her maid.

When the lady of the red cushion came close to Porthos, Porthos drew his dripping hand from the basin. The fair devotee touched the great hand of Porthos with her delicate fingers, smiled, made the sign of the cross and left the church.

"This was too much for the other woman. She entertained no doubt that there was an affair of gallantry between this lady and Porthos. She contented herself with saying to the musketer with concentrated fury:

"Eh, M. Porthos, you don't offer me any holy water?"

Porthos at the sound of that voice started like a man awakened from a sleep of a hundred years.

"Ma-madame," cried he, "is that you? How is your husband, our dear M. Coquenard? Is he still as stingy as ever? Where can my eyes have been not to have even perceived you during the two hours the sermon has lasted?"

"I was within two paces of you, monsieur," replied she, "but you did not perceive me because you had no eyes but for the pretty lady to whom you just now gave the holy water."

Porthos pretended to be confused.

"Yes," said he; "that is a duchess of my acquaintance with whom I have great trouble to meet on account of the jealousy of her husband and who sent me word that she should come today."

"M. Porthos," said the procureur, "will you have the kindness to offer me your arm for five minutes? I have something to say to you."

"Certainly, madame," said Porthos, winking to himself. At that moment D'Artagnan passed in pursuit of milady. He cast a passing glance at Porthos and beheld this triumphant look.

"Ah, M. Porthos," cried she, "ah, M. Porthos, you are a great conqueror; it appears. That must be a princess at least, that lady with her negro boy and her maid."

"Madame, you are deceived; she is simply a duchess."

"Ah, you are quite the pet of the ladies, M. Porthos! How quickly men forget!"

"Still less quickly than the women, in my opinion," replied Porthos; "as a proof, madame, I may say I was your victim; when wounded, dying, I was abandoned by the surgeons; I, the offspring of a noble family, who placed reliance upon your friendship, I was near dying of my wounds at first and of hunger afterward, in a beggarly inn at Chantilly, without your ever deigning once to reply to the burning letters I addressed to you."

"But, M. Porthos," murmured the woman, who began to feel that, to judge by the conduct of the great ladies of the time, she was wrong. "It was my husband that would not hear of leading."

"Mme. Coquenard," said Porthos, "remember the first letter you wrote me, and which I preserve engraven in my memory."

The woman uttered a groan.

"Besides," said she, "the sum you required me to borrow was rather large; you said you wanted 1,000 livres."

"Fie, madame, fie!" said Porthos, "as if disgusted; 'let us not talk about money, if you please; it is humiliating.'"

"Then you no longer love me!" said his companion slowly and sadly.

"Think of the offense you have committed toward me, madame! It remains here!" said Porthos, placing his hand on his heart and pressing it strongly.

"I will repair it; indeed I will, my dear Porthos."

"Besides, what did I ask of you? A loan, nothing more. After all, I am not an unreasonable man. I know you are not rich, Mme. Coquenard, and that your husband is obliged to bleed his poor clients to squeeze a few paltry crowns from them."

She was pleased.

"Please to know, M. Porthos, that my strong box, strong box of a lawyer's wife as it may be, is better filled than those of your ruined minxes."

"That, then, doubles the offense," said Porthos, disengaging his arm, "for if you are rich, Mme. Coquenard, then there is no excuse for your refusal. Let us say no more upon the subject, I beg of you. You don't know me—all sympathy is extinct between us."

"Begone, then, to your beautiful duchess. I will detain you no longer."

"And she is not to be despised, in my opinion."

"Now, M. Porthos, once more, and this is the last! Do you love me still?"

The Skin and Not the Blood.

Until recently it has been a generally accepted theory that eczema was a disease of the blood. Scientific investigations have taught us that eczema is positively a skin disease and curable through the skin alone. Meritol Eczema Remedy is applied directly to the diseased skin, the effect is marvelous and its results permanent. Do not delay trying Meritol Eczema Remedy. Reliable Drug Co., Sole Agents.

How many of us know the number of diverse industries that are located here; and how many of us can tell what lines they manufacture? Probably but very few and yet it is upon these industries that the city depends for its prosperity. Let us lose no opportunity to get a better acquaintance with local industries and with this acquaintance grow in loyalty to them such that the question of buying their products shall be a matter of course.

As I go drilling through the town I see old horses, broken down, poor, friendless and abandoned pligs, still straining feebly in their tugs, to haul big loads beyond their strength, and hoping death will come at length. Ah, what's more pitiful than these, the worn out hags with broken knees—and broken hearts as well, no doubt—their ribs, all fleshless, sticking out, with shoulders sore and tortured eyes, where, rather than million flies? When they were young and fat and strong they labored blithely all day long on the pike like Maud S. raced—they

But when the vim of youth was o'er, and they could carole no more, like outcasts they were chased away to die at least six deaths a day. No kindly rifle ends life's storm; no friendly dose of choliform; they'll bring a few dishonored yen, so send them to the dinky men! Wherever I see a poor old stee, sad-eyed, despairing broken-kneed, I think, "The man who were him down should haul his burden through the town."

Woman.
A gentleman sat down to write a deed and began with "Know all women by these presents."
"You are wrong," said a bystander, "it ought to be, 'know all men.'"
"Very well," answered the other, "if all women know it, all men will, of course."—Life.

Public Duty.

The great chance of the present
Ah, do not pass it by!
But teach dear little children
To swat the infant fly.

WILFRED'S JOY.
"Gee whiz! I'm glad I'm not a fish,"
Said Wilfred, with elation,
"Because the schools they travel in Ne'er close for a vacation."
